

UVCMI 777™ · SECTOR ROTATION

Relative Strength Report

All 36 SPDR sector & industry groups, ranked by multi-timeframe momentum. Data through July 1, 2026.

The Rotation at a Glance

Relative strength answers the question that matters most in a two-sided tape: where is money actually going? Running the UVCMI 777™ engine across all seven timeframes and ranking every sector by its composite momentum (COMP) surfaces the leadership and the laggards in one read. ALIGN (−7...+7) shows how many timeframes agree.

Reading It

Leadership. The top of the board — SOXX (+1318), XSD (+1051), XBI (+1050), XNTK (+682), XHB (+546) — is where strength is concentrated: growth and technology groups, aligned green across the timeframe stack. These are the sectors carrying the tape.

Laggards. The bottom — XES (-205), XOP (-268), XLE (-272), XLC (-309), XME (-482) — is where money is leaving: energy and materials, red across most frames. In a rotation, these are the funding source, not the destination.

What it means. A tape led by semis, biotech, and broad tech while energy and metals bleed is a classic risk-on, growth-forward rotation. For a long book, the message is to concentrate where the alignment is deep and positive, and to treat the red block as a source of relative-weakness shorts or simply avoid. Watch the ALIGN column: a name slipping from +7 toward 0 is the early warning that its leadership is fraying — before price confirms it.
